A Chance Meeting

David stood in line behind a taller brunette. He knew the face but, for the life of him, couldn't place it. Until he saw the blonde standing next to him. After the man ordered, he leaned in.

"Blonde roast, huh?"

"Yeah," He replied, slinking an arm around Taylor. "I'm partial to the blondes."

"I, myself, like the gingers but I can totally see why you'd go for the blonde roast."

"I've always wanted to try the caramel." The blonde spoke up, giving David a suggestive grin.

"Have you now?"

Then the ginger Dave joined in. "I sure do like chocolate."
